Thank you for the feedback, just curious, how much did you get paid an hour? Because 50 shoes an hour is a crazy ratio and did you feel you were compensated fairly? Also where are you now? Are you with another company and will you continue to stay in the authentication game?

If you were going to buy sneakers from the resell market, would you prefer to buy them from StockX based on your time working there? Why or why not?

85 Reply Award Share ...

grapeallday • 2y ago

I feel like stockx rushes their authenticators, but given the time they should be able to get the job done. I always asked if I wasn't 100% sure. So during peak season aka November-Feb it's hard to say because of how busy they are and how many shoes they have to pump out.

You'd be surprised at how good some of the early SB fakes were, Supas, Heinekens, Freddy's, Tiffs, even Tweeds, and a VERY good OG Raygun fake. We'd catch them and spread the word, but it was different back then because we didn't have the wealth of knowledge that the internet now provides, it was much more primitive. N-SB Org was about it. Personally, I also didn't have the money or connections to see, touch and smell hundreds or thousands of real pairs back then. So a lot of it was learning off photos or looking at pairs in skate shops.

Its about a month, you'll go through different pairs in different days. Like Jordan 1's, 4's, Yeezy 350, 700. Dunks . TS1's.

They'll throw in a bunch of fakes for you to catch. They train you well, if you have attention to detail you'll be fine.

What's your take on the really expensive shoes that get pretty close to 1:1 reps like Travis jordan 1 highs and lows. Is that something you'd ever trust buying from StockX/ goat or should you steer clear. Just worried if I'm spending 2k and I'd have to dispute something like that

Also small follow up. If you dispute you have to send the shoe back to StockX and they check it again. It's in their best interest to just deny it right. So if you do hypothetically do get sent a fake, how can you ever PROVE it is fake to them? Do you just have to hope they are honest when you send it back?

⊖ ↑ 1 ↓ 💬 Reply 🏆 Award ➦ Share ...

I think the quality on Travis Scott 1's is unmatched. That's the one shoe I can spot fakes on foot when people are wearing lol.

They are super lenient with returns because of the the whole Nike lawsuit situation.

So far, I only have 1 bad exp with StockX, I shipped them a yeezy V2 black reflective (I bought them on Reddit). They said it was not passed authentication. They send them back, and the box was damaged badly. So I have to sold them on Goat for cheaper and of course passed. So I'm not sure if the box was damaged during transit and they just not pass it so they can ship them back to me lol

24 Reply Award Share ...

grapeallday • 2y ago

Honestly could be crushed in transit, always pack with bubble wrap or newspaper so its not moving in the box. They do the best they can to repair broken boxes and flatten out damage that occurred in transit. At the end of the day they want the sale to go through.

29 Reply Award Share ...

layziethelkid • 2y ago

What are some grey area stuff that you would pass or work arounds people would do to get the sales?

21 Reply Award Share ...

grapeallday • 2y ago

People always try to sell shoes worn once but you can always tell. I guess just pushing through bad QC by Nike. Super bad glue stains or painting but it's authentic. They have paper from every shoe so if it comes in without it they put authentic paper in.

Did they have free Gatorade in the break room etc ?

Once a week we would get something catered. During peak season maybe twice. There was a vending machine to buy drinks. They had plenty of basic snacks. Catered meals could be amazing or dog crap though. It was a bit or miss.

If it's not bad they'll fix it.. If its an expensive pair of shoes or really bad they'll either buy it or try contacting the seller and see if they want it. and may offer a cheap discount code.

what determined a jordan 1 as a fake in the process? especially travises

16 Reply Award Share ...

grapeallday • 2y ago

Mostly smell and how they look under a black light. different stitching lights up or a different color sole, leather quality.

It's hard to have a fake have a good box paper and shoe. BUT people can put really good fake shoes in a real box.

TBH TS1's are really easy to authenticate, the attention to detail is hard to match.

14 Reply Award Share ...

usually none it was more people sending in the wrong size and style codes, but some days the flood gates would open and you would have 8 maybe 10. Not as common as you would think though.

28 Reply Award Share ...

Gambitasdf1 • 2y ago

What percentage of shoes were reps?

13 Reply Award Share ...

grapeallday • 2y ago

less than .05%. You could go days with out seeing one and then have like 6 in a day.

The most common thing for not passing is people sending in the wrong size or style code.

Skip to main contentLog In

What about things like PlayStations and AirPods? Are you making sure those are correct by opening them or just get them in hand and then send them through to make the profit off fees?

⊖ ↑ 10 ↓ 💬 Reply 👤 Award ➦ Share ⋮

grapeallday • 2y ago

If it averaged out, probably 1 fake a day. It's more common people send in the wrong style code or size.

Most faked would be anything going for $$, people usually try to get a quick lick in or send a pair in super early to see if it will get pass

Was more time/attention given to big ticket items? I had a pair of special box Chunky Dunks arrive, verify, and ship out same day. Made me hella sus.

6 Reply Award Share ...

grapeallday • 2y ago

Yeah, it may be checked by a lead on super high price stuff. Everything we get shipped in that day gets shipped out before we got to leave unless we hit 12 hours. you would have some pairs that would need to have a box repaired or another person too look at so some would stay another day.

I know the answer to this one because i was the first person to sell a certain hype shoe through that app, months before the release. The shoes landed, they took photos of them, and used the photos in a promotional email, all before they paid me out for the sneaker.

I wouldn't say hard to fake. It's just not in demand. China wants to make stock that will fly. The OVO 8's were probably the last faked 8 but that's just a guess.

Alright, cool. Thanks for the reply and for checking all those shoes for us! I have South Beach and Multi Color 8s on the way, seller is now sending them to Stock.

I guess you can really tell most Jordans aren't for balling in, because the 8s are super efficient with traction and ankle/arch support for on-court.

But I'm kinda glad my favorite AJs for hooping aren't in high demand to avoid fakes, haha.

Mason Plumlee (who had done an AMA here not long before) offered up a pair of Nick Youngs players only sneakers so I let the people we were working with at StockX know and they decided they wanted more celebrity involvement. I told them we are volunteer mods on this sub and that we don't have contacts for anyone other than Mason. From there they started ghosting us eventually telling us they no longer were going to host the fundraiser. Masons people stepped up and put together something for us but it was nowhere near as successful as the original plan would have been.

Tl;dr - StockX agreed to host a charity raffle, requested we run it on their platform then backed out at the last minute because the mod team didn't have any contacts with celebrities.

One area I always thought could be a little shady on StockX and Goat was some of the small issues they will flag with an authentication asking you to reduce the sales price by X% to see if buyer still wants to purchase. I had a couple of shoes sold where the authentication flagged something like "damaged box" or "discoloration" with nondescript photos.

How do I/we know that they are actually offering that discount to the buyer? I have bought countless shoes from StockX and Goat and have never been offered a discount from authentication even though I have received some trash boxes, worn "new" shoes, etc.
